

Project Lab: Ideas to Action

Project lab is a semester-long, one credit course that is offered as a South Burlington High School class. It is ideal for students who are interested in the Big Picture model, but are not ready to fully enroll in the Big Picture program.

Through rigorous independent projects and authentic assessments, students earn credit for exploring their interests and passions. Big Picture staff members guide students through the process of developing a project plan, complete with individualized learning goals and assessment methods.

For more information about the Project Lab, contact Kevin Downey: kdowney@sbschools.net or drop by the Big Picture office.

“There is a growing desire in Vermont for more personalized learning environments that give students a stronger voice in the topics they are studying. Schools and community partners are searching for extended learning opportunities that allow students to learn beyond compartmentalized content areas. In this course, students have the opportunity to decide on their own curriculum content.”
